

UBC Master of Management

Open new doors in your field, prepare yourself for any industry.

Expand your career opportunities and gain a foundation in business with the 9-month UBC Master of Management (MM) program at UBC Sauder's Robert H. Lee Graduate School. This program is tailored for university graduates with non-business undergraduate degrees. Whatever your degree and background, you can gain the business skills needed to impress today's employers and gain an edge in the competitive job market.

The UBC MM Experience

The program provides theoretical and applied learning with case studies, teamwork, and presentations as key components of the program. Learn from the best and gain in-depth business expertise across a range of subject areas, including:

- Strategic management
- Finance
- Managerial accounting
- Marketing
- Entrepreneurship
- Organizational behaviour and human resources
- Information technology
- Operations and supply chain management
- Ethics and sustainability

Experiential Learning

Make the most of the Community Business Project and apply your new skills to solve a business problem for a non-profit organization or social enterprise. This required component of the program enables you to gain valuable consulting experience while working on projects such as:

- Business plans and feasibility studies
- Fundraising and development initiatives
- Recruitment and retention strategies
- Corporate partnership strategies
- Marketing and social media strategies

Yale M2M Dual Degree

UBC MM students have the opportunity to apply to pursue their MM and a Master of Management Studies in Global Business and Society from the Yale School of Management. Build diverse alumni networks from two of the world's top business schools and learn how to analyze global risks, trends, and resulting implications on business.
